| Abstract | |
| The triple burden of malnutrition is a critical global health challenge driven by intersecting processes, including urbanisation, food systems transformation and socio-economic inequalities. This CoRE comprises three core ARUA institutions, two core institutions from The Guild and other public, private and nongovernmental organisation from both Africa and Europe. It seeks to advance the study of food environments through cutting-edge research, develop the next generation of scholars through an equitable capacity-building programme with support for early career researchers and engage in collaborative research, education and policy-related activities to enhance food environments. The disciplinary and sectoral diversity represented by this CoRE supports local research and engagement, while at the same time developing collaborative engagement to understand food environment drivers and their implications for planetary and human health. | |
